MCCAIN RECOVERS FROM SURGERY, VOTE DELAYED

The U.S. Senate will delay its consideration of healthcare legislation while Arizona Republican Sen. John McCain recuperates from surgery, Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell said. McCain's absence cast doubt on whether the Senate would be able to pass the legislation to dismantle and replace Obamacare. McConnell needs 50 "yes" votes for passage in a chamber the Republicans control by a 52-48 margin. "While John is recovering, the Senate will continue our work on legislative items and nominations, and will defer consideration of the Better Care Act," McConnell said in a statement.

5 CONGO RANGERS KILLED RESCUING JOURNALIST

Five park rangers were killed in a joint operation with the army to rescue an American journalist and three park rangers, who went missing in a wildlife reserve in eastern Democratic Republic of Congo, a local official said on Sunday. Gunmen attacked the group late on Friday in the Okapi Wildlife Reserve in Mambasa territory. Some others in the group, including two Dutch journalists, escaped. Mambasa administrator Alfred Bongwalanga said security forces and park rangers had launched a rescue operation that located the missing members of the group. It was not immediately clear how the rangers were killed. "There are five dead. They are all park rangers who were involved in the operation. They had been backing the army," he told Reuters by telephone.

CHICAGO ANTI-VIOLENCE ACTIVIST GUNNED DOWN

An anti-violence activist and a 9-year-old were among 10 people who were fatally shot in Chicago over the weekend, the latest in a rash of killings that has shaken the third-largest U.S. city and raised questions about how to staunch the bloodshed. All told, more than 40 people were shot in Chicago from Friday to Sunday morning, including Willie Cooper, 58, who ran a South Side community center, according to police. No arrests had been made. Cooper was gunned down on Saturday afternoon by the occupants of a dark-colored car that had stopped as the activist walked near the nonprofit where he worked, law enforcement and local media said. "Willie is preventing violence, trying to find jobs for ex-offenders, working in this community. I almost want to name him the Mayor of 95th Street," one of his friends, Bamani Obadele, told WLS-TV.

IRAN SENTENCES US DUAL NATIONAL FOR 10 YEARS

An Iranian court has sentenced a U.S. dual national to 10 years in jail on spying charges, Iran's Judiciary spokesman said, the latest case of dual nationals held on security charges in the country. The spokesman did not name the person or give details on when the sentence was passed but said the person was a citizen of the United States and an unnamed country other than Iran. "This person, who was gathering information and was directly guided by America, was sentenced to 10 years in prison, but the sentence can be appealed," spokesman Gholamhossein Mohseni Ejei said on state television. It was not immediately clear whether Mohseni Ejei was referring to Nizar Zakka, a Lebanese citizen with permanent U.S. residency, who has been sentenced to 10 years in prison and a $4.2 million fine after he was found guilty of collaborating against the state.

TRUMP'S AMERICA

TRUMP'S AMERICA: TIME TO FIRE THE KIDS

@henican

It was a perfectly nice idea when Marie Wilson, Daren Ball and Gloria Steinem, at the Ms. Foundation for Women, dreamed it up in 1992.

Take Our Daughters to Work Day, the concept was called. Sons were added in 2003. And every year, on the fourth Thursday in April, a few million moms and dads took their daughters and sons to the office, the store, the factory, the bowling alley or the construction site. The kids got an up-close glimpse of how their parents made a living. The co-workers got to "ooh" and "aah" over the cuteness of each other's offspring. And on Friday, all the little kiddies went back to school.

Donald Trump got all of it except the back-to-school part. Inside Trump's White House, every day is Take Your Kids to Work Day.

Daughter Ivanka and son-in-law Jared Kushner have official positions. Jared runs about half the government. Some people call him the real Secretary of State. The president's two oldest sons, Donald Jr. and Eric, theoretically tend to the family real estate business in New York. But given their father's famous disdain for line drawing, ethical and otherwise, both young men are constantly dipping in and out of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

The truth is, such arrangements are always problematic, whether the family runs a dry cleaner, a Chinese restaurant or the government of the United States. You're too easy — or too hard — on the blood-and-marriage employees. The other employees naturally resent them. And firing a son or a daughter makes next Thanksgiving dinner so uncomfortable.

So now look.

Donald Jr. is at the center of the Russian-hacking probe. He's dragged his brother-in-law in. Neither one has the background or experience to run a local Motor Vehicles substation. But how can they and the others be bum-rushed from the West Wing?

Democrats aren't the only ones demanding Trump fire the children.

"I'm going out on a limb here," said Bill Flores, a Republican congressman from Texas, "but it would be in the president's best interest if he removed all of his children from the White House. Not only Donald Trump [Jr.], but Ivanka and Jared Kushner."

Get back to class, all of you!

Inside the 'rapid advance of robotics' at TechCrunch's Robotics fair at MIT

TechCrunch Sessions: Robotics is bringing all things 'bots to a one-day event at MIT on Monday.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The future is now, and it may be most evident in the advanced world of robots. On Monday, some of the top players in the robotics field will come together at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for TechCrunch Sessions: Robotics, a one-day event. There, experts will talk everything bots, from "building the robot brain" to robots' role in humanity, as well as conduct workshops and show off demos of the latest working robots.

Ned Desmond, COO of TechCrunch, gave a run-down of what to expect at the event and what robots mean for our future.

How does this event compare to others TechCrunch has done? Ned Desmond: The startup world has spread to an ever increasing number of categories and it has become impossible to address them all in a meaningful way in our larger Disrupt events, which we hold three times a year. We are starting to break out some of those topics into one-day focused efforts.

Robotics can still be daunting or sci-fi to many people. What do you say to them, and what is the future of robotics that you see? The rapid advance of robotics is inevitable, and to some extent just an ambient presence in the world around us. Autonomous drones fly and fight in military conflicts and self-driving cars are on the roads. Robots in industrial facilities are moving out of cages to work side-by-side with humans. Robots to take care of the elderly or deal with basic home care are also a reality.

For the most part, it's hard to argue that any of this is troubling because it's all in the service making our lives better and safer. The fears of a sci-fi nature tend to revolve around the idea of a superior AI capability that might make robots "smarter" than humans and result in unknown consequences. That's a real issue and we will discuss that at the show.

What area of robotics is set to grow the fastest (i.e., autonomy, drones, etc.)? Great question! That's very much on the minds of the VCs and entrepreneurs at the show. Warehouse robotics is a very big category, as are collaborative robotics, which are the new generation of machines in the workplace and factories. Those are huge markets. Medical robots are hugely varied in type but also very important.

Is this event just for those trying to enter the world of robotics, or can anyone get something out of it? The robotics scene, broadly speaking, is going to be a huge employer in the years ahead. The jobs will encompass everything from developers and fabricators to repair people, sales and marketing and operations folks. The opportunities are huge.

Aaron Carter was arrested, of course

Aaron Carter — a man in the midst of an infinite battle for relevancy — is in the news again for being a hot mess.

The former teenybopper and little brother of Nick Carter was arrested on DUI and marijuana charges on Saturday night. According to People, the 29-year-old was pulled over around 9 p.m. in Habersham County, Georgia, which is a hop, a skip and 90 miles north from Atlanta.

Carter refused to undergo a breathalyzer and drug test, as you do, and was charged with driving under the influence, possession of less than one ounce of marijuana and possession of drug-related objects. Because if you got the weed, you need something to smoke it out of, duh.

Because of said arrest, Carter was unable to make a performance in Kansas City, to the chagrin of what I assume was approximately 10 fans.

Prince Harry's BFF spills the beans

Another day, another tiny little morsel about the maybe future marriage of Prince Harry and Meghan Markle. And this time, it's personal.

Well, when I say personal, I just mean that someone close to Harry is dropping hints like they're hot.

The Daily Star reports that former U.S. marine Kirstie Ennis, who has been old friends with Harry for five years, confirmed she's expecting a royal wedding between Harry and Markle. Sure!

When asked if she expects Harry to pop the question soon, Ennis nodded. She nodded! Stop the damn presses because a woman nodded her head.

Honestly, if these two could just go ahead and actually get engaged, I would really appreciate it. Like, I know Prince Harry and Meghan Markle aren't thinking about me, exactly?

But I would super appreciate it.

Cameron Diaz & Drew Barrymore are besties

Drew Barrymore and Cameron Diaz, two rich ladies who act sometimes, are best friends. And they have been since "Charlie's Angels," a movie that came out in 2000 that I, as a youth, was obsessed with.

Barrymore and Diaz spent some cute quality time together over the weekend, and 42-year-old Barrymore was touched in her heart parts so much so, that she dedicated an entire Instagram post to her. Aw!

"Remember to spend a moment with the ones you love in your busy life. She has made me feel beyond beautiful. Always has. Always will."

That's a really cute tribute and all, but also? I don't mean to be rude, but I saw "Charlie's Angels."

And I, for one, think that it's rude that Lucy Liu wasn't invited to this best friendship. Won't someone think of Lucy?

Ariel Winter slams body shamers, again

Ariel Winter is clapping back at some body shamers via Twitter, and I can't even believe this is a thing. Why random people think they have the right to police other random people's bodies, I shall never understand.

After getting some flak from commenters, Winter took to Twitter to remind everyone to mind their dang business with tasty little rant.

"Pretty annoyed about the focus on the fact that I wear shorts, and the commentary that I'm 'squeezing' into them or the idea that it's not OK for me to wear shorts," she wrote. "Please leave young women alone," she continued.

"We're just living our lives." For real, for real though. Can we just let the young ones live? There's plenty more to focus our efforts on like, I don't know, climate change and Trump's rampant sexism. Priorities, man.

Cobie Smulders like playing a bad xennial

The "How I Met Your Mother" actress stars in "Friends from College."

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

Cobie Smulders is back on a TV comedy, this time, playing a xennial whose life is about to blow up.

On Netflix's new eight-part series "Friends from College," the 35-year-old plays Lisa, the most sympathetic in a group of immature old college friends who never really got over their glory days at Harvard (cue eye-roll), although they're now approaching 40.

When Lisa and her husband, Ethan (Keegan-Michael Key), join the gang in New York City, the former ACLU lawyer has landed a higher-paying gig at a misogynistic hedge fund to support Ethan, who's "working on a new novel" but really spends his time having an affair with their mutual friend Sam (Annie Parisse). Lisa, meanwhile suffers through the emotional and physical pains of her first IVF cycle.

Cobie Smulders in
"Friends from College"
NETFLIX

But Lisa isn't blameless for long. Smulders teases. At first, "it's very, 'Oh, poor, Lisa,'" says the "How I Met Your Mother" actress. But "once she realizes her relationship is not what it was, her whole world sort of crumbles." That's when the role gets fun for Smulders. "It's one of the reasons I was excited to take on this job, because this woman who is seemingly very together and educated and on this great trajectory, she just goes through the wringer and loses her mind and makes some poor choices," she explains.

The Vancouver native calls in from her home in Manhattan, which she's leaving soon to move back to LA with her husband, actor Taran

Killam ("Drunk History," "SNL"), and their two kids.

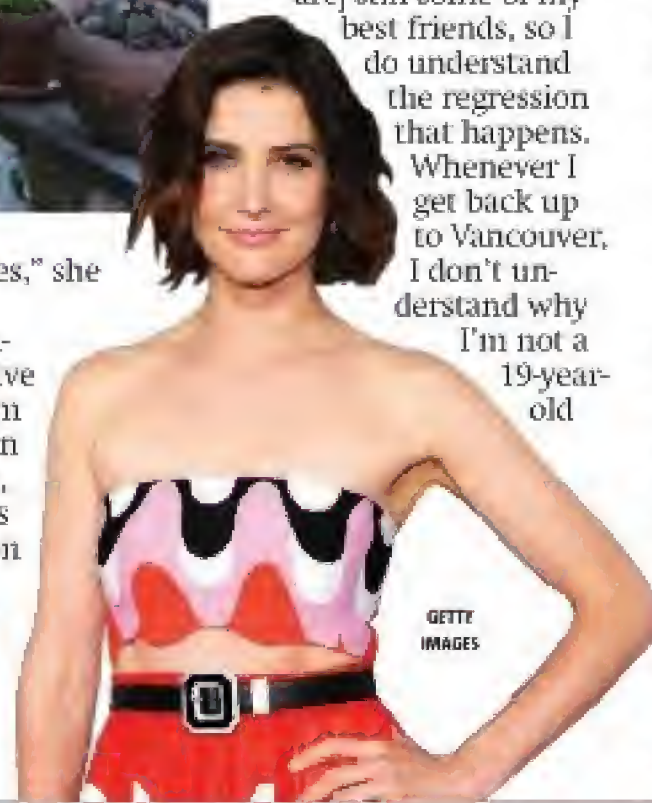

"Friends from College" is all about college nostalgia. We read that you never attended undergrad. Was it hard to channel that sentimentality?

I have a kinship with my high school friends [who are] still some of my best friends, so I do understand the regression that happens. Whenever I get back up to Vancouver, I don't understand why I'm not a 19-year-old anymore. All of a sudden, there's this weird time warp that happens. My current life, where I'm a 35-year-old woman with two children, doesn't make a lot of sense to me a lot of the time. [Laughs]

You've spoken about how, as a cancer survivor, you were initially told by doctors that you wouldn't be able to have kids. Were you able to tap into that struggle for this role?

Absolutely. Although I didn't have kids [via IVF], I did so much research [into it] when I was told I wouldn't be able to have kids. I have so much sympathy for women who have to go through it, multiple times, it seems. Also, the feeling as a woman, going, "This is something I've always wanted. [Having kids] is literally the one thing my body is capable of doing, over a man" — when that is taken away from you, it really changes your perspective.

Qualifying for your Medical Marijuana Card still makes sense!

Medical Marijuana is used to treat the following conditions:

• HIV/AIDS • Glaucoma • ALS • MS • Hepatitis C • Parkinson's • Crohn's • Cancer and any other condition our doctor recommends.

With a medical card:

- The cost will be cheaper. In Colorado recreational strains sell for $35 an eighth while the same strain for medical patients is $100/oz!
- No tax on medical — a 12% tax on recreational at this point. Washington State has a 37% tax on their recreational products;
- A discount for medical and possible insurance coverage for it;
- You may be exempt from any taxes if you are a registered patient as in Washington State?
- You may choose from a greater VARIETY, TYPE, and STRENGTH of CBD and THC strains;

MEDICAL MARIJUANA IS AVAILABLE NOW.

- Recreational marijuana will not be sold in stores until 2018.

An all-local mobile farmers market launches in Boston

Bringing fresh food to communities with limited access.

HENRY JANI
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

A 2013 study by the Project for Public Spaces found that people in low-income neighborhoods are less likely to use farmers markets not because of price but because of lack of information and accessibility.

The Trustees Mobile Farmers Market is trying to change that by coming to community sites in Dorchester and Roxbury with seasonal produce, meat and dairy for sale. All products will be sourced locally, which is a first for a mobile market in Boston.

"Our goal for the Trustees Mobile Farmers Market is to make shopping for healthy, locally-produced food as easy and affordable as possible," says the Trustees Program Director Cathy Wirth in a statement. Prices are economical, and vendors will be accepting both cash and credit. Individuals receiving SNAP/EBT, WIC, and Seniors Farmers Market Nutrition Program benefits can expect to be supported as well.

"We hope that our community locations, reasonable prices, and acceptance of SNAP and food access program benefits will provide more people with an opportunity to experience how different and delicious food can taste when it's produced and harvested nearby," adds Wirth.

The Trustees Mobile Farmers Market will also be working with the new Healthy Incentives Program launched in April. Those using HIP benefits can have their purchases of local fruits and vegetables matched when purchased at participating farmers markets, farm stands, mobile markets or farm shares.

This program was founded with the help of Fresh Truck and the Boston Public Market. Fresh Truck is a nonprofit organization that works to end the dearth of local, organic food in several Boston communities.

"Our mission has always been to address the community health challenges linked to poor food access," says Fresh Truck co-founder and executive director Josh Trautwein in a statement. "We are happy to be part of the solution by supporting partners in Boston and beyond who want to launch mobile markets and build connections to healthy food."

The pilot season of the market will run every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, except holidays, through Nov. 4 at the Dorchester Head Start, Whittier Street Health Center, Dimock Center and Roxbury YMCA. More information and locations can be found at the Trustees Mobile Farmers Market website.

CELTICS' LONG-TERM PLANS COMING INTO FOCUS

@burke_metro

Fantasy time is over for Celtics fans as for the second straight year, post-Fourth of July has brought a period of reality.

Last year, there was the flirtation with Kevin Durant — but Celtics fans settled for an offseason highlighted by the addition of free agent Al Horford. This year, there was the flirtation with Paul George, but Celtics fans will now have to settle for an offseason highlighted by the addition of Gordon Hayward.

So the Celtics did not win the NBA offseason, but they did get substantially better. In fact, better enough that I actually think they can beat LeBron and the Cavaliers next spring (the Cavs are an absolute poop show right now).

As always, however, the barometer in Boston is winning championships and the C's just aren't going to win a championship (i.e., possess enough talent to topple Golden State) as presently constructed. They need yet another superstar player to compete with the unfair Warriors.

Jayson Tatum and Jaylen Brown are the keys to the future for the Celtics. GETTY IMAGES

Money is already an issue for the Celtics as the NBA salary cap did not jump as high this summer as most expected. That's why Danny Ainge's days of landing a max player in free agency are probably over for the foreseeable future. Money is also why the Celtics have been unable to swing a deal for a player of George's caliber.

Yes, there will be big names that arise in trade talks in the coming months, but for now the market is dry for the Celtics when it comes to swinging a blockbuster.

So forget trades for a bit. In fact, the Celtics may be able to get to the next level by not even making a monster deal.

The easiest way for the Celtics to add that final superstar piece to the puzzle will come in-house, as I believe Ainge is banking on Jaylen Brown, Jayson Tatum or whomever they draft with the 2018 Brooklyn pick to become a bona fide top 15 player in the next few years. Yeah, it would be nice if all of them became perennial All-Stars, but that's just not realistic. Drafting players, even with high picks, remains mostly a crapshoot. Ainge knows this, and that's why he wants to have three or four swings at this thing.

While the conventional wisdom a few years back was that Ainge was going to trade away one — if not all — of the Brooklyn picks, it looks like he has chosen to build through the draft much like Golden State (initially) did. The thinking here is that one of these young lottery picks will blossom into something very special, and will do so with a relatively cheap rookie contract.

What's quite interesting is that in attempting to build a title team this time around (as opposed to the quick fix worst to first teams of 2007 and 2008), Ainge has had his reservations about giving up draft picks in exchange for proven talent. He's opted to instead get All-Star level players through free agency, mostly because he doesn't have to give up anything in return (except money). Not that Gordon Hayward is on the level of Kevin Garnett, but Ainge essentially just got this decade's franchise player without having to give up an Al Jefferson (gotta think Brown or Tatum will be as good or better as Big Al has been in the NBA these last 10 years).

So the Celtics are essentially looking to have their cake and eat it too. Time will tell if that cake will taste as good as the one that was whipped up in the Bay Area several years back.

E-Rod returns, Blue Jays in town

Red Sox boss Dave Dombrowski will surely be looking for a bat at the MLB trade deadline later this month as the Red Sox' offense has been mighty ugly of late.

Prior to the All-Star break, the Sox endured losses of 4-1 and 1-0 at Tampa Bay, and this past weekend they lost to the Yankees 4-1 in 16 innings and 3-0 on Sunday afternoon. The Sox should be able to take advantage of the team that's in town this week, though, as the Toronto Blue Jays own a team ERA of 4.57.

Eduardo Rodriguez hasn't started for the Sox since June 1. GETTY IMAGES

Marcus Stroman (9-5, 3.28 ERA) will get the ball for the Jays on Monday at Fenway while the Sox will counter with Eduardo Rodriguez (4-2, 3.54 ERA).

Rodriguez (right knee subluxation) hasn't pitched for the Red Sox since June 1. Rodriguez looked sharp in his last rehab assignment in Pawtucket, allowing just one run in 6.1 innings.

"[I felt] really, really good," Rodriguez said of the July 9 start for the Paw Sox. "I threw all my pitches. It feels really good. I did everything with the slider, with the changeup, with the fastball. It feels really good."

Doug Fister (0-3, 6.75 ERA) is tentatively slated to pitch Tuesday for the Sox against Toronto with Drew Pomeranz (9-4, 3.75) set to go Wednesday and Chris Sale (11-4, 2.59 ERA) ready to go in a Thursday matinee at Fenway. MATT BURKE

Pastrnak still without a deal

Bruins fans are playing the waiting game.

It has been over a month and a half since the Bruins last took the ice for their season-ending Game 6 overtime loss to the Senators.

Free agency has been ongoing for two weeks, so why is it taking so long for Boston and its star right wing David Pastrnak to agree to a contract extension that was believed to be a mere formality? The restricted free agent saw his three-year deal, which was signed when he was a rookie in 2014, recently expire. As the 25th overall pick in 2014, he was a Bruin for the now bargain-basement

David Pastrnak is in line for a big pay day from the Bruins. GETTY IMAGES

price of $2.75 million (all guaranteed), which included a signing bonus of $277,500 and an annual average salary of $925,000. Given his age

(he recently turned 21) and the fact that he is coming off a career-best 34 goals and 36 assists 2016-17 campaign, it doesn't take superagent

Scott Boras to figure out that he's in line for a huge pay increase.

Pastrnak has been relatively quiet on social media so far this summer

(last posting a picture on Instagram on June 30 from his native Czech Republic and retweeting a GIF of Rafael Nadal bumping his head at Wimbledon). Rather than simply relying on social media to paint the complete picture like a clueless teenager, let's look at what some important parties in this saga have stated on the record.

Back in May, Bruins president Cam Neely exclaimed, "We want David and David certainly reiterated a number of times that he wants to play here and stay here (in Boston). He loves it here, so I feel confident that we can get something done with him."

The team has already extended a qualifying offer to him for 2017-18 but it's clear that they probably low-balled him since that happened weeks ago and there hasn't been a response from Pastrnak or his camp at least publicly. At the end of Bruins Development Camp this past Sunday, B's GM Don Sweeney had this to say about the Pastrnak negotiations: "I've spoken to his group and hopefully that will lead to a resolution at some point in time in the near future, but we have no timeline."

One would think Boston will do the right thing by Pastrnak and will have learned from its mistakes in the recent past of trading talented goal-scorers like Phil Kessel and Tyler Seguin. Pastrnak is a budding superstar and a potential cornerstone of the franchise for years to come. There is no need to create unnecessary drama for a guy who is going to be counted on for big things with the Bruins.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court

In the matter of: Grace M Edwards

Suffolk Probate and Family Court

24 New Chardon Street, Boston MA 02114

(617) 788-8300

To all interested persons: A Petition has been filed by: Bernard J Bond, III of Sudbury MA and Margaret A Flanagan of Cambridge MA Timothy C. Blank of Newton MA requesting that this Court find, declare, order and adjudge that:

1. The Trust of Grace M. Edwards shall be construed so that there is no preference that the trustees at all times be men;
2. The Trust of Grace M. Edwards shall be construed so that the Trustees shall have authority to distribute from the Trust up to $20,000 per beneficiary in each school year, adjusted annually for inflation in accordance with the Consumer Price Index;
3. The Trust shall be modified by deleting that portion of the Trust on page 14 that reads "Said trustees shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for their services but shall be paid only upon a per diem basis according to time devoted to the business and affairs of the trust and in no case shall this compensation exceed Thirty Dollars ($30.00) per day, per trustee" and replacing it with the following:

"Said trustees shall be entitled to reasonable compensation for their services according to time devoted to the business and affairs of the trust; provided, however, that such compensation shall not exceed the sum of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) per year, per trustee, adjusted annually for inflation in accordance with the Consumer Price Index; and provided, further, that said sum shall be treated as an annual cap rather than a fixed amount of compensation to be paid independent of time or effort expended."

4. The Trust of Grace M. Edwards shall be construed so that there is no requirement that its accountant have a usual place of business in the City of Boston;
5. The Trust of Grace M. Edwards shall be construed so that there is no requirement that each year the Fund publish a statement of the financial condition of the Fund, certified by an accountant, for two successive days in a daily secular newspaper of general circulation in Suffolk County; and
6. Such other and further relief as this Court deems just and proper.

Aries Your emotions will be difficult to control. An argument will lead to regrets. Turn your attention to doing something constructive. Engage in activity with a friend.

Taurus Keep busy. Don't let anyone throw you off your schedule by using criticism. Keep a positive attitude and concentrate on what you are trying to accomplish.

Gemini Suggestions will be made if you socialize or share information with your peers. Take whatever you hear at face value, but be prepared to follow through on your own.

Cancer You'll be tempted to act out if you don't like what someone is doing. Don't criticize or judge others, or you will get the same in return.

Leo An unexpected change of plans will make you feel uneasy or uncertain. Ask direct questions to gain a better understanding of the situation and how to respond.

Virgo Engage in discussions that will help you master a technique that can help you get ahead. Don't let love interfere with your professional responsibilities.

Libra You may want to jump into something that someone else has labeled a good deal, but a reserved attitude will spare you from the stress that such risk-taking could cause.

Scorpio Learn as you go. Keep your thoughts to yourself and consider different ways to use your skills to help bring about a positive lifestyle change.

Sagittarius Change can be good, but don't let impulse take the reins. Do your homework and find out exactly what you need to know to be successful. Take control.

Capricorn Take some time to nurture important relationships or to make noteworthy changes to the way you live. Making home improvements will be rewarding.

Aquarius Miscommunication is apparent. Be careful how you express your thoughts. Focus on what you can do to improve your appearance or capabilities.

Pisces Lend a helping hand, but don't let anyone take advantage of you. Emotional manipulation will affect the way you feel about someone. EUGENIA LAST
